SECTION 4

COMPLETE EACH GAP IN THE PASSAGE WITH A WORD FORMED FROM THE WORD IN BRACKETS.

Scientists are 1 _____ (EXCITE) waiting for new images and observations when a NASA spacecraft flies over the 2 _____ (MYSTERY) planet of Mercury. They hope to obtain about 1,200 images and other data from instruments aboard the Messenger spacecraft that could 3 _____ (REVOLUTION) the study of the solar system.

It is the scientists' 4 _____ (BELIEVE) that our planet was formed at the same time as Mercury by similar processes - but Mercury is rather 5 _____ (USE). It is so dense that more than two-thirds is probably made up of an iron-like metal. Besides this, as it is so close to the sun there is a temperature 6 _____ (VARY) of more than 600 degrees between day and night at the equator and there may even be ice at the poles in craters that are in permanent shadow.

"This is raw scientific exploration and the suspense is building by the day," said Alan Stern, the 7 _____ (ADMINISTRATE) for NASA's science mission.

Messenger will take 8 _____ (MEASURE) of the mineral and chemical 9 _____ (COMPOSE) of the surface, study its atmosphere and magnetosphere and obtain data about other aspects of this strange small planet. The spacecraft will fly at a 10 _____ (HIGH) of only 124 miles above Mercury's surface, and will use the planet's gravitational pull.

The fly-by will be the first since Mariner 10's visit in March 1975, when that spacecraft conducted three flights over the planet.

SECTION 6

READ THE TEXT AND CHOOSE THE MOST SUITABLE ANSWER TO EACH QUESTION.

Financial careers in the City

A financial career in the City of London with its challenging work and generous pay packets is an attractive proposition for many young people just out of university. It is important, however, that they fully understand what a career in the city involves and the pressures it can create. Stress is a fact of life, but in the City it is contagious and can encourage unhealthy habits.

Studies have indicated that alcohol and drug abuse, compulsive gambling and depression are much higher among people who work in the City. One 43-year-old consultant who has chronic fatigue syndrome and has just quit the City says:

"Many employers offer complete private medical insurance, which includes a free trip to a mental health clinic if you have problems. The drawback is that as soon as you feel better you are back facing the same situations that caused your problems."

Working in the city is definitely not for people who are sensitive or for those who value their free time. For investment bankers and market analysts the day starts so early that they practically eat breakfast the night before! Overtime is obligatory, typically ten to twenty per cent on top of normal working hours, and it's usually unpaid. Then there's the mandatory socializing. Graduate trainees are expected to participate with enthusiasm in team-building exercises and events. These can be great fun or a horrendous prospect, depending on your mood and attitude.

It sounds tough and it is. One man in his late thirties, who recently moved into investment banking, says:

“I hear so many graduate trainees say that they’re planning to do five or maybe ten years in the City and then leave. The problem is that it’s all too easy to get trapped once you’re used to the money and the lifestyle — a smart flat, kids in private schools and a spouse who depends on your salary. It might look glamorous from the outside but the reality is that they’re financial handcuffs.”

Still interested? Then you should consider doing an internship, which is where you work for your prospective employer in the summer holidays before your final year at university. This type of work experience will help to boost your CV and your job applications, because it will show that you are serious; it will also give you an insight into what life is really like in the sector. Some jobs require specific qualifications but most top employers will accept any degree subject provided it’s from a decent university. You will also need to show initiative and drive, plus good analytical, communication, literacy and team-working skills. Fitting in with other people is what really counts. The people hiring you think of it as a marriage contract and it could be for life.
